

This World AIDS Day,
we'd like to give you something
to smile about.

loveLife is working with the Department of Health and your local clinic to create an environment where young people can go for sexual health advice and care without fear of embarrassment or of being turned away. In a place where the nurses have a youthful approach when assisting young people with sexual health. These clinics are springing up all over the country. So check out your local clinic, you may be quite surprised.

Adolescent friendly clinics brought to the young people of South Africa by loveLife and the Department of Health.
